SEVEN-CAR TRAINS. BUT THEY ARE VERY FAR APART.

Square Takes Longer than That from the Bronx to the City Hall Station.

Service on the Third avenue "L." inefficient ever since the coming of the Subway, is daily growing worse. No pretense of maintaining a schedule is any longer made. Transportation facilities are decreasing at the very time when they should be increasing, and the patrons of the line fear that unless there is an immediate change in the order of things they will soon be reduced to the level of the passengers of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

Signs He May Use.

One sign, which Mr. Ahearn is said to favor particularly, is the "crossroads" index, placed at right angles on top of a "dead" lamppost. It is argued that this is economical, especially so for Tammany, because the lamppost is already in position. On the northwest corner the Borough President has been experimenting with a large box sign entirely in the signs being lighted by reflected light. The third street sign is designed to fit on the new Weisbach lamps, being similar to the one now in 100.

Comptroller Grout is opposed to the "bird-cage" blue flash glass box signs, but it has not been decided to take them down, although the cost of maintenance is $17.30 a year each, aggregating $20.000 annually for the Gas Trust.

Short-Haul Patrons Suffer.

Short-Haul Patrons Suffer.

The officers of the Interborough Company, which controls the elevated as well as the Subway, of course, declare that the present service is just as good on the Third avenue as it was before the coming of the Subway. Those who are daily compelled to use that line, however, realize that the service has has been much curtailed. They say that since seven-car trains have been run in the rush mours the headway between trains is tonger than before and that the trains are more crowded than ever.

"Everything is now sacrificed to the express service," said one of the men who are compelled to use the road dally this morning, "with the result that we short-haul patrons get practically no service at all. It takes me longer to go from Saventy-sixth street to Twentyfrom Seventy-sixth street to Twenty-ighth street now than it takes a man to go from Harlem to City Hall on an express."

THREW PAINTER OUT OF HIS WIFE'S APARTMENT.

Zimmerman Took Three Friends Along When He Went in Search of Reese.

John Zimmerman, a carpenter, accompanied by three friends, went to the apartment of his wife, from whom he has been separated for some months. 8 at No. 54 East Fourth street, early to day and found August Reese, a painter, there. Zimemuman and his friends grabbed Reese and threw him down two flights of stairs. They followed him down and were about to chastise him when Policeman Kuhn came along and took them all to the East Fifth street station-house.

There Zimmerman accused Reese of alienating the affections of his wife. Capt. McDermott locked Roese up and let the others go. In the Yorkville Court to-lay Zimmerman told Magis-trate Baker that Reese was formerly his fricad, that he took him to board with him and that conditions got so that he had to leave. Reese told the Magistrate that Zim-merman had left his wife destitute, and that he had remained as a hourder that he had remained as a boarder to nelp her out. He denied all of Reese's allegations, Nevertheless the Magistrate fined him $5.
